We have a style on a WPF TabItem that gives it a large border and an icon. We want to take that style, move the icon to another section of the TabItem, and extend the border's location. (We're using this style on an accordion control, and it is necessary to be able to change the tabItem's border while keeping the accordion's border style.) We've tried: Moving the border to a different control (can't be inside the "tab region" due to missing.net version requirement). Moving the icon to a different control (can't be inside the "tab region" because of the missing.net version requirement, and it has to be in the same region as the content anyway). Altering the border style (keeps the border in the correct place, but the style is clearly being applied to the entire TabItem). In the end, I resorted to this:
